

THE DINING ROOM

Wine List

SAKE

Sake is a Japanese alcohol made by fermenting rice. The individual rice grains are polished to varying levels to remove the hard bran coating. The degree to which the bran is removed effects the fermenting process and further distinguishes the different styles of Sake; Junmai, Honjozo, Ginjo, Daiginjo. Slightly different to wine, Sake is produced using a process more similar to brewing where the rice starch is converted into sugars and rather than brewers yeast the mystical Koji mould is added to kick start the process. The master Sake producers of Japan are exceptionally skilled, revered worldwide and produce stunning variations in flavour.

JUNMAI

Often with a richer, fuller flavour, these Sakes are made purely with rice, water and koji mould with no additional alcohol added. At least 30% of the rice grain must be polished away to be considered Junmai

HONJOZO

Generally lighter than Junmai a Honjozo Sake has a small amount of distilled alcohol added during the brewing process. Again, at least 30% of the rice grain must be polished away to be considered Honjozo.

GINJO

Lighter, more complex and fragrant, often with fruit notes, Ginjo Sakes are premium Sakes. At least 40% of the rice grain must be polished away to be considered Ginjo and a large amount of this process is carried out by hand. Ginjos can be classified both Junmai or Honjozo.

DAIGINJO

Produced in small batches, Daiginjo Sakes are ultra premium. At least 50% of the rice grain must be polished away to be considered Daiginjo and some are so polished that only 20% of the original rice grain remains. Again a large amount of the process is carried out by hand. Daiginjos can be classified both Junmai or Honjozo although the majority are Junmai as the craft is so highly skilled it is deemed a shame to sully the purity of the process.

UMESHU

A Sake that is sweetened with Japanese Plums, almost a more classic liqueur.

La Maison

From its birthplace at the bottom of the hill of Corton, Maison Louis Latour has over two centuries of Burgundian history. Founded in 1797, the house has become a natural custodian of an ancient tradition. Authentic to its roots, it has always been a point of honour to remain independent and family-owned. The Maison is now run by Louis-Fabrice Latour, who represents the eleventh generation since his founding ancestor. Each generation has worked to preserve this unique heritage, whilst ensuring the future with a visionary and ambitious spirit.

There's an almost mythical allure surrounding the name Pétrus - an iconic wine that every true connoisseur should experience at least once in their lifetime. With this in mind, we are delighted to offer Pétrus directly from Maison Pétrus' cellars, a rare opportunity in the United Kingdom.

Renowned as one of the most expensive and sought-after wines in the world, Pétrus owes much of its exceptional character to the estate's unique blue clay soil, known as smectite. This distinctive terroir retains moisture, imparting the wine with its signature richness and age-worthy profile. Pétrus is celebrated for its unparalleled depth, often achieving extraordinary levels of aromatic complexity, opulence, and a silky texture that distinguish it from all others.

However, we must note one condition: to preserve the integrity of the estate and guard against counterfeit bottles entering the market, each bottle must be destroyed on-site following consumption.

HEAD SOMMELIER - GIOVANNI TALLU

Giovanni joined Beaverbrook in January 2018, having previously worked as Head Sommelier at Annabel's, one of London's most prestigious members' clubs. During his twenty-two year reign there, Giovanni cultivated a reputation as one of the leading experts in the field of fine wine.

Since his arrival at Beaverbrook, Giovanni has overseen the expansion of the wine list, which now boasts a fine array of the very best wines from all over the world. Something of a Francophile and a traditionalist, Giovanni's admiration for the classic wines of France, has been the driving force behind the current selection of fine Burgundy and Bordeaux wines. Furthermore, the passion and enthusiasm Giovanni possesses for his craft ensures that he is always on hand to offer his expertise, ably assisted by sommelier Rhys.
