A LUXURY RETREAT
ROOTED IN PEACE

On the largely untouched south coast of Mauritius, Shanti Maurice occupies a distinct position within the island's luxury landscape. Spread across 36 acres of tropical coastline yet comprising only 61 suites and villas, the resort is defined less by visibility and more by atmosphere.

The property takes its name from the Sanskrit word for peace — Shanti. The concept is neither decorative nor abstract. It informs the spatial planning, the pacing of service, and the tone of the guest experience. Even at full occupancy, the scale of the grounds allows for a sustained sense of privacy and stillness — a rare attribute in destination resorts.

In a market often characterised by density and spectacle, Shanti Maurice operates with deliberate restraint.

ARCHITECTURE & DESIGN

The architecture of Shanti Maurice reflects a dialogue between landscape and living space. Designed by architect Jean-Marc Eynaud, with landscape architecture by Bill Bensley, the resort was conceived as a tropical haven where nature, privacy and spatial flow define the guest experience.

Set across expansive gardens along the preserved southern coast, the design prioritises openness and continuity — allowing suites & villas, pathways and communal spaces to unfold organically within their environment.

Rather than imposing itself on the landscape, the resort reveals it — shaping an atmosphere where architecture recedes, and a sense of calm naturally takes its place.

WELLNESS AS FOUNDATION, NOT A FEATURE

While the Indian Ocean is home to numerous luxury spas, few operate at the scale — or with the structural integration — of Shanti Spa.

Covering 7,500 m<sup>2</sup>, the spa functions as a sanctuary within the resort. Its programmes are anchored by personalised consultations, shaping bespoke wellness pathways that extend beyond individual treatments.

Panchakarma therapies, daily yoga, meditation and nutritional guidance are offered within a framework that prioritises continuity and immersion. The result is less a sequence of appointments and more a calibrated retreat experience.

As global luxury travel increasingly intersects with structured wellbeing, Shanti Maurice stands among the region's most comprehensive island-based wellness destinations.

AN INTEGRATED APPROACH TO WELLBEING

Central to the Shanti Maurice experience is the integration of expertise across disciplines — where traditional Ayurvedic principles, movement, nutrition and restorative therapies are brought into dialogue rather than offered in isolation.

Guided by in-house specialists, wellness journeys are designed with continuity in mind, allowing each element to build upon the next. Consultations inform not only treatments, but also lifestyle recommendations that extend beyond the spa environment.

This coherence transforms the experience from a series of individual moments into a more considered approach to wellbeing — one that supports balance in a lasting and tangible way.

MEASURED LEADERSHIP

Since 2022, General Manager Brice Péan has led a deliberate and discreet repositioning of Shanti Maurice. With an international career spanning Asia, Europe, the Middle East and the Pacific, his move to the resort reflects a conscious shift toward a more refined, human-scale approach to luxury hospitality.

His leadership is both visible and intentional — present across the grounds, in constant dialogue with guests and teams, and grounded in a meticulous attention to detail. This proximity is not incidental; it is fundamental to his philosophy that luxury cannot be managed from a distance, but must be continuously felt, observed and adjusted.

Under his direction, the resort has clarified its identity as a boutique destination rooted in wellness, while aligning its commercial strategy with the true value of the guest experience. The approach remains measured and uncompromising: refinement over expansion, atmosphere over amplification.

“At Shanti Maurice, luxury is not about scale or spectacle, but about space ...”

“... to slow down, to reconnect, and to experience a sense of calm that has become increasingly rare.”

CULINARY EVOLUTION

In 2026, Shanti Maurice enters a new chapter with the arrival of Culinary Director Chef Kevin Marchetti, marking a deliberate evolution of its gastronomic identity.

Bringing a global perspective shaped across Europe, South-east Asia and East Africa, Chef Kevin Marchetti's approach is rooted in both structure and creativity — balancing operational precision with a deeply personal relationship to food.

His philosophy is not driven by reinvention, but by alignment: refining what already exists and elevating it through technique, consistency, and a sharper culinary narrative.

At Shanti Maurice, this translates into a more cohesive dining journey — where each outlet contributes to a broader story, rather than standing in isolation.

The island's multicultural heritage remains central, with Arabic, Indian, Creole and Asian influences continuing to shape the menus. Under his direction, these expressions are reinterpreted with greater clarity and restraint, allowing ingredients and flavours to speak with intention.

Equally important is the connection to people. Known for his hands-on presence and guest interaction, Chef Kevin Marchetti places as much value on the dining experience as on the plate itself — ensuring that each moment, from preparation to service, feels considered and personal.

This is not a shift in identity.
It is a refinement in how that identity is expressed.

FAMILIES AT SHANTI MAURICE

At Shanti Maurice, space is not only a luxury — it is what allows every guest to experience the resort in their own rhythm, including families.

Set across expansive tropical gardens, the resort offers a dedicated 2,000 m<sup>2</sup> Kids Club designed for children from 4 months to 12 years, where days unfold through creative, nature-inspired and culturally rooted activities. Younger guests are invited to explore, learn and play in an environment that feels both nurturing and thoughtfully curated.

This sense of balance extends across the entire property. While children are fully welcomed, the scale and layout of the resort ensure a natural coexistence between family moments and the tranquillity sought by other guests.

Here, family travel is approached with the same intention as every other experience — with space, care and quiet attention to detail.
